A year of gratitude

DEAR FRIENDS,

When you think about being in the hospital, you might imagine what it's like to be a patient. But there's another perspective to consider, the perspective of the patient's family and friends.

These are the people who provide love and support. They help their loved ones get to appointments and navigate the hospital. They listen to treatment plans and try to keep everything going at home, even when they can't be there.

As someone who has sat in the waiting room, I have felt the roller coaster of worry and hope that family members experience. And I have felt the relief that comes from people in the hospital showing how much they care.

Families on the 8 North floor of Marshfield Medical Center feel that comfort each day as they sit in the newly-renovated waiting room with its new furniture and enjoy the warm colors. On Thursday afternoons, patients and families gather in the waiting room for Music Therapy.

Moments like these shape the hospital experience for patients and families. And they are moments you make possible.

In this issue of BenchMarks, you'll read about moments that take place in Marshfield Medical Centers and outside our four walls because of generous people like you. Whether it's the moment a young cancer fighter shares a laugh with a Child Life Specialist (pg. 4), the moment described above when a family listens to music in a waiting room (pg. 10) or some of our favorite moments of 2019, shared in our Gratitude Report (pg. 14), I hope you'll feel the difference you make throughout Marshfield Clinic Health System.

As we move forward into 2020, your support will continue to enrich lives in so many ways. Thank you for giving the power of moments—big and small—to the patients we serve.

In gratitude,

Teri M. Wilczek, C.F.R.E
Chief Philanthropy Officer, Marshfield Clinic Health System Foundation

Riana Huth, cancer survivor, enjoys a cup of coffee at her home in Granton.

Riana's story:

Finding light in the darkest moments

Your support for Child Life and Expressive Therapies helped Riana through her cancer journey

You can't help but get caught up in this 19-year-old woman's joy, even during those bad, tough, dark days of cancer treatment. She played ukulele. She sang songs. She found joy at crazy times. She did not let cancer dampen her spirit. If anything, her light would shine brighter than ever and it still holds true today.

Riana was a high school junior in January 2018 when she noticed small red bruises on her ankles that traveled up her legs. A trip to the provider near her Granton home showed a very low platelet count and she was quickly transferred to Marshfield Children's Hospital.

Just a little later, she learned the bruises were petechial hemorrhaging, a sign of not good things to come.

"I just thought I was going in for a platelet transfusion," said Riana. "As I went up to the Children's Hospital, everyone there was already expecting me like it was a big deal. At first I was very confused. After I had my transfusion, Dr.

McManus came in, sat down with a somber and sincere look on his face as he told my family that I had leukemia."

After more tests the next day, Riana was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukemia (ALL), a cancer typically affecting younger children or older adults, so her case was rare.

"Surreal" describes those first few days, but the moment Riana met her Child Life Specialist it became real, in a good way.

"I had no idea what Child Life was before this experience," said Riana. "When I was diagnosed, a Child Life Specialist was there to explain what was going on at the time and what was going to happen. She counseled me through it all and told me that even though a lot was going to happen, it would be ok and she would be there for me, that I wasn't alone."

Marshfield Children's Hospital's specially-trained Child Life Specialists use medical play, art and music therapies to support youth and their families through hospital stays. They offer comfort, acceptance, and security for the families they serve. In 2019, Child Life Specialists helped more than 8,600 patients at Marshfield Children's Hospital.

Riana and her mom Shawn have supported each other through Riana's cancer journey.

Music Therapy is 100% donor-funded.
 In 2019, Music Therapists served 3,500 patients, including 2,300 kids at Marshfield Children's Hospital.

Riana and Music Therapist Amanda play Riana's favorite songs together. Music Therapy supports mental, emotional and physical healing during treatment.

The Child Life program is 100% funded by donations to Marshfield Clinic Health System Foundation and Children's Miracle Network Hospitals at Marshfield Children's Hospital. Because of generous donor support, there is never a cost to patients to use this service.

Child Life and Expressive Therapies became so important during Riana's first months of treatment.

The week of her diagnosis, a Child Life Specialist held Riana's hand during the first surgery to place a port for chemotherapy and sat with her during that first treatment.

After going home, Riana developed an infection and needed another surgery to remove the first port and put in a PICC line. That was an 18-day stay at Marshfield Children's Hospital.

"This was the time when Child Life was the most important," said Riana. "I was isolated and didn't feel like I had any friends. If people had any cough or cold, they couldn't visit me. I hadn't even told a lot of people I had cancer at that point because I was still adjusting to how life was now going to be. My mom stayed with me a lot. My mom is like my best friend. But there were times when she couldn't be there and it was a big relief for her, too, that Child Life could be there for me.

"The first surgery I had, I remember when we reached the point where my mom couldn't go any further and my Child Life Specialist was there to step in," said Riana. "She reassured my mom that she would be there and not leave my side."

Child Life Specialists brought activities in daily, like card games. They drew with her. Mostly, they just talked, encouraging her to talk about her diagnosis, treatment, friends and other things in her life. They became friends and mentors.

After going home, Riana's weekly chemotherapy treatment meant compromising. She often lacked energy and had to wear a mask to avoid germs during the most intense stage of her treatment.

Three months after she was diagnosed, Riana attended her junior prom.

"My prom definitely wasn't how any teenager dreams a junior prom should be," said Riana. "The week before prom I had an appointment to get chemo and the day before prom I had to get blood tests to make sure I was healthy enough to be able to go to prom. When I went with friends for photos to be taken the weight of the dress exhausted me. I had to keep sitting down between pictures. We had plans to go out for supper but the food made me nauseated, so instead I went to my friend's house to eat and rest before the dance while they all went to coronation. After a couple hours at the dance I got tired, so I had to leave early."

Having the same treatments and procedures over and over took its toll on her physically and mentally.

"I would get nervous and sick before every treatment, but then I would think about the nurses, Child Life Specialists and people who were there for me. Knowing they were there helped me come in and not be so anxious."

Her Child Life Specialists kept her smiling even on the most difficult days, including the day she shaved her head to prepare for losing her hair.

"I was really in denial from the time I was diagnosed until I lost my hair," said Riana. "I always used my hair almost as a shield I hid behind. My Child Life Specialist sat me down and told me I was going to lose my hair but that it wasn't going to change who I am. Child Life actually had a party for me when we shaved my head. My friends and family were there and brought my makeup from home. As I prepared for shaving my head, I wanted to feel my best, even though I was still scared of what was going to happen. But as my friends, family and Child Life Specialist came into the room, they made something that was really scary into something fun."

Music Therapy, a part of Expressive Therapies, also became an important part of her treatment. At least once a week, a Music Therapist would play music with Riana. After learning Riana plays the ukulele, her Music Therapist often left a ukulele in her room so she could play between their sessions together. She brought songs that were particularly meaningful to Riana and they also wrote a song together.

Like Child Life, Music Therapy is 100% donor-funded. Board-certified Music Therapists support areas throughout Marshfield Medical Center including pediatrics, oncology, palliative care and more. They use music to address patients' physical, emotional, cognitive and social needs. In 2019, Music Therapists served 2,300 kids and families.

Music Therapists and Child Life Specialists worked together to use music to help Riana heal. After procedures, her Child Life Specialists held her hand and played Disney soundtracks for her because they knew those were her favorite songs.

"It really felt like Child Life and Music Therapists didn't just have to be there for me, they wanted to be there for me," said Riana. "They were there to advocate for me. Most have become friends, not just people working in the hospital."

Riana is now in the maintenance stage of her treatment and in May 2020 she will ring the "end of treatment" bell. She plans to attend college this fall to study music. One possible career? Music therapy.

"My purpose is in music," said Riana. "Music gives people a way to express themselves and participate in the healing process. Even if I do not go on to do Music Therapy, I intend to use music for the benefit of others, to encourage other people through music and reach others through something that has brought me through the hardest time in my life."

Riana will never forget her care team that has become like family. Riana often stops by Marshfield Children's Hospital even on non-appointment days to deliver treats and chat with the Child Life and Expressive Therapies team. They giggle, share stories, break randomly into song and talk about how they will miss each other after Riana goes to college.

"It's exciting to know that when this is all done, I can move on with my life and that cancer isn't who I am," said Riana. "I would like to be known as a kind person, a joyful person, someone who likes music and is passionate about what I believe. I want to take a bad situation and use it to help other people using my story and what I have gone through, to educate and help others through hard times which I have been through. I want people to recognize that they, too, can get through whatever it is they are facing."

Cancer doesn't define Riana. But with the help of her Child Life and Expressive Therapies team, she's learned to define herself with joy, hope and light that will continue to inspire everyone she meets. ♦

More than hospitals, thanks to you

You bring the power of moments to hospital patients receiving care at Marshfield Medical Centers

Each Thursday, patients on 8 North, Marshfield Medical Center, Marshfield, gather in a room to listen and sing along to music.

They relax, close their eyes and smile. Some might even forget for a time that they are in the hospital. It's a special moment of healing for patients and their families.

Moments like these shape the care experience for hospitalized patients.

Those moments are possible because of donations from people like you.

As Marshfield Clinic Health System expands its hospital services to more of Wisconsin's rural areas, donor support is more important than ever to provide care beyond treatment for patients.

Marshfield Medical Center hospital locations include Marshfield, Eau Claire, Rice Lake, Ladysmith, Park Falls, Neillsville and Beaver Dam. Additional hospitals are planned for Wausau/Weston and Minocqua. Donations to Marshfield Clinic Health System Foundation support each of these locations, which means that almost every patient served at Marshfield Medical Centers is touched by philanthropy in some way.

"Philanthropy plays an important role for hospitalized patients," said Teri Wilczek, the Health System's chief philanthropy officer. "When a child interacts with a Child Life Specialist, a patient experiences Music Therapy, a family in need receives financial assistance, a person battling cancer finds hope thanks to a clinical trial... all of those moments happen because of our donors' generosity."

Donations are important to fund new equipment, specially-designed spaces and support programs in Health System hospitals. These services enrich lives in many ways, from providing patients with a comforting setting in which to listen to music, to offering specialized care that helps patients heal.

Because of donor support, these places are more than hospitals. They're places for enriching lives. ♦

Highlights of your impact for hospitalized patients across the Health System:

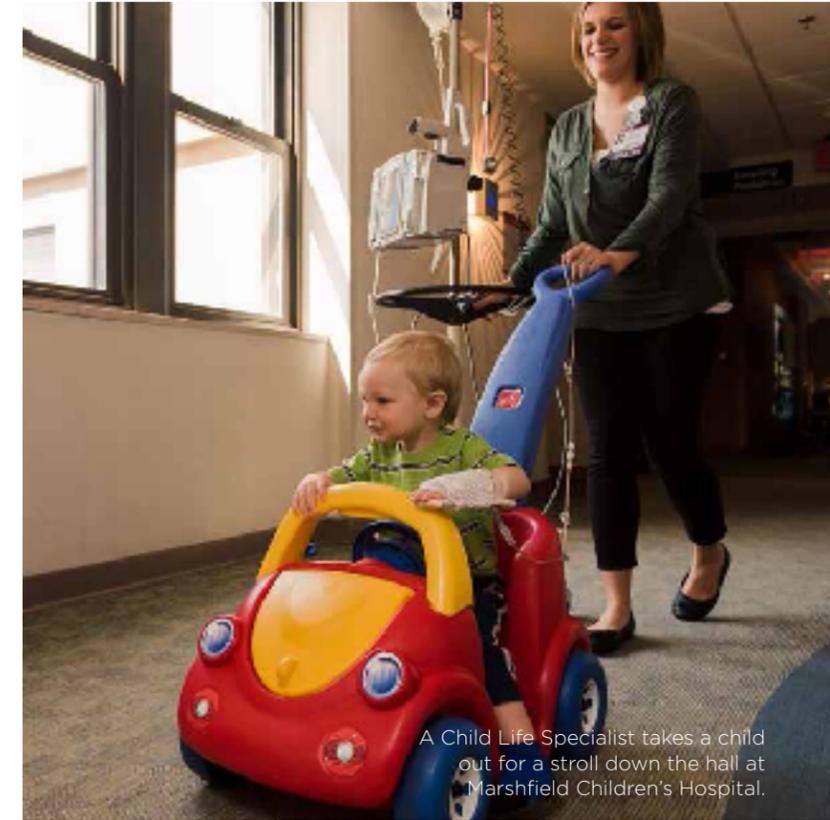

Remodeling and building hospital spaces

The 8 North waiting room is just one example of how donations to Marshfield Clinic Health System Foundation transform existing hospital spaces. 8 North was remodeled in 2019 thanks to a generous donation from Eugene Krutza of Rudolph, Wisconsin to include new furniture and wood floors, artwork, new TVs and more. Donors have also funded updated areas in Marshfield Children's Hospital, Marshfield Clinic Cancer Centers and other Marshfield Medical Center locations.

In addition to remodeling spaces, donations also support building new hospitals. At Marshfield Medical Center-Eau Claire, donations funded the new cancer center and areas of the hospital. The new Marshfield Medical Center-Neillsville, set to open in 2021, will feature a new community Wellness Center, only possible with donor support, and Infusion Suite.

The new 8 North waiting room features updates including new furniture, artwork and a new TV. Music Therapy also visits patients in the 8 North waiting room every Thursday.

Children's Miracle Network Hospitals at Marshfield Children's Hospital

Marshfield Children's Hospital is one of only four designated Children's Hospitals in Wisconsin and one of only 170 Children's Miracle Network (CMN) Hospitals partners nationwide. Your gifts help provide more than 40 pediatric specialties to give kids compassionate, expert care they need close to home.

Children's Miracle Network
Hospitals

Donations fund specialized equipment needed to treat kids. In the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU), donations to CMN Hospitals fund NICView cameras. These cameras allow parents in other locations to watch their babies in their NICU Isolettes. Your gifts also fund services like the Snoezelen Room, which offers a sensory experience for kids and families and mobile distraction stations, which provide sensory stimulation for kids where and when they need it. Using these stations helps keep kids calm when they are agitated, experiencing pain or feeling frustrated.

Child Life and Expressive Therapies

Child Life and Expressive Therapies rely exclusively on donations. Child Life Specialists help children cope with the medical experience using medical play, art and music. This service costs more than $650,000 per year. There is never a cost for families to access Child Life because of donor support.

At Marshfield Medical Center, Music Therapy also is provided for patients. Board-certified Music Therapists support areas throughout Marshfield Medical Center including pediatrics, oncology, palliative care and more. They use music to address patients' physical, emotional, cognitive and social needs.

Child Life and Expressive Therapies helps kids and families cope with hospital stays using medical play, distraction, Music Therapy and more.

Help for patients in need

In rural communities served by Marshfield Clinic Health System, many hospitalized patients struggle to make ends meet while going through an unexpected health crisis. Your support for Angel Funds and Compassionate Care Angel Funds provides financial assistance for patients in need so they can focus on healing.

Each year, families receive more than $250,000 through Angel Funds and Compassionate Care Angel Funds. Angel Funds support non-medical needs like utilities, rent and mortgage, travel expenses and more so that families can focus on treatment. Compassionate Care Angel Funds help hospitalized patients offset costs of going home, including medical transportation and prescriptions.

The Children's Lives Include Moments of Bravery (CLIMB) program provides emotional support for kids whose loved ones are battling cancer.

Support services

Belonging to a community is important to healing, which is why your gifts fund support groups for patients at each Marshfield Medical Center. Support groups offer a network for patients battling a life-threatening condition, new parents, grieving families and more.

The Children's Lives Include Moments of Bravery (CLIMB) program illustrates the impact of support services. CLIMB offers emotional support for kids to help them cope with a loved one's cancer diagnosis through a series of group sessions. This program is so successful that CLIMB facilitators in Eau Claire were invited to become national CLIMB trainers. Children in Marshfield also have access to CLIMB.

Other support groups include Women Living With Hope, providing women affected by breast cancer with informational, emotional and practical support; Coping with Cancer; and more.

Other support services at every Marshfield Medical Center hospital include comfort items, educational resources and community workshops.

Volunteer Services

Volunteers complement the care provided by hospital staff and are instrumental in helping to meet the needs of patients, families and visitors. They shape the patient experience by helping patients navigate the hospital, giving comfort items and even providing pet therapy services.

Most Marshfield Medical Center hospital locations provide volunteer opportunities for community members to give of their time and talent. More than 750 volunteers serve across more than 100 areas in Marshfield Clinic Health System and annually provide more than 90,000 hours of service.

Volunteers serve throughout Marshfield Medical Centers.

The new community Wellness Center will only be possible with donor funding.

• MINOCQUA

A new Marshfield Medical Center-Minocqua is being built for Northwoods residents. This hospital will include emergency services, birth center and enhanced cancer care. Donations will ensure hospitalized patients have access to support services at the hospital and fund new equipment.

Golf for Research | Aug. 20

Raised nearly $62,000 for adult and pediatric cancer research

Nearly 150 golfers, sponsors and volunteers enjoyed sunshine and golf swings at Golf for Research at Lake Arrowhead Golf Course in Nekoosa, which raised over $62,000 to support adult and pediatric cancer research. - This vintage Hollywood-themed event, "Lights, Camera, Auction," was presented by Miron Construction.
- For the second year in a row, attendees' generosity led to a record-breaking Fund-A-Need, this time reaching $52,500. These funds allow NFMC and Pittsville Fire Department to re-introduce the Agricultural Rescue Training Program and collaborate on farm rescue and safety techniques, ensuring safety for farmers and rescue personnel.
- Sue Decker and Team Decker Real Estate rose to be a Champion Against Hunger after purchasing the signature live auction package and generously donating to local charities.

Celebrating Research Day and the Gwen D. Sebold Fellowship for Outstanding Research | Oct. 9

Marshfield Clinic Research Institute held the first Celebrating Research Day and honored Huong McLean, Ph.D., M.P.H. with Sebold Fellowship to advance research.

- Each year, this $5,000 Sebold Fellowship is presented to a researcher or staff member at Marshfield Clinic Research Institute to support research in his or her chosen field.
